TROOPERS ON GUARD AT EDISON'S GRAVE AS CROWDS DEPART

Inventor At Peace; Enterprises Will Remain In Family

WEST ORANGE, N. J., Oct. 22.—Six silent state troopers in French blue tunics and riding breeches stood as an honor guard today over a simple, newly made grave in Rosedale Cemetery, Orange.

The copper and concrete lined vault below lay the body of Thomas A. Edison, giver of light.

At one side of the grave was a wreath of Magnolia leaves tied with a green ribbon, a last tribute to the famous inventor from his friend, the President of the United States. On the other was a wreath of evening. Only the family and a bouvardia. It was from Mrs. Hoover that the flowers were given.

Young McKinney underwent another grilling today. Officers believed he knew where his sister had gone.

Simply as he lived, the great man was buried in the still, purple haze of evening. Only the family and a group of intimate friends saw the bronze casket lowered to its final resting place. Among these were Mrs. Hoover, Henry Ford, Harvey Firestone, Charles M. Schwab, and Preston Sloope.

Mrs. Edison, who so courageously had borne up under the ordeal of attending her famous husband during his last illness did not falter at the last rites. As the coffin was about to be lowered, she stepped to the edge of the grave, kissed the casket, then tossed a white rosebud on it as it descended.

Although McKinney was freed from technical custody, he was being watched. It was to him that Mrs. Judd Monday noon went for help in endeavoring to obtain the murder trunks from a railroad station. He said his sister had told him "the trunks contained the bodies of women."

Possible motives for the murders were in confusion as Phoenix, Ariz., investigators reported that Mrs. Judd and Miss Lerol, who had been jealous of one another's attentions to Miss Samuelson, and had died in showering upon her numerous gifts of rare perfumes, flowers, and candles, also had been jealous over the attentions paid both by a millionaire Phoenix "playboy."

With Edison's death, it was believed, direction of the vast enterprises he headed would probably continue in the family. How immense his holdings were probably will not become public knowledge until his will is filed for probate.

The extent of his personal fortune has never been disclosed.

The entire nation paid an unusual tribute to Edison's memory last night. In accordance with President Hoover's proclamation, lights were turned out for one minute at 10 o'clock. In New York, Broadway's glitter was dimmed and the Statue of Liberty darkened. In private homes, public places, on the streets, one minute of darkness prevailed.

Throughout the nation, time was turned back to the days of fifty-two years ago yesterday when Edison made his first test in a dimly lit world with the incandescent bulb.

CANTON MAN SLATED FOR HEAD OF MASON

SPRINGFIELD, O., Oct. 22.—Delegates to the 122nd annual communication of the grand lodge Free and Accepted Masons of Ohio entered the final day of their two-day convention here with a meeting scheduled this morning to transact final business, elect officers and select the time and the place for the next conclave.

Harvey Ake, prominent Canton jurist, was slated to succeed Judge Harry Gram of Springfield as grand master of the lodge. The next meeting place, it was anticipated, will be Canton.

The first day of the convention here closed last night with a banquet tendered to veterans of Ohio Masonry who had been members twenty-one years or more. More than 100 attended.

Annual reports of the organization disclosed a slight loss in membership but a strong financial standing.

PEACE ENDORSED

DAYTON, O., Oct. 22.—The world peace movement today bore the indorsement of the Ohio Women's Christian Temperance Union, holding its 58th annual convention here. Petitions approving the proposal will be presented with other peace petitions at the world disarmament conference in Geneva next February.

FEAR TRUNK MURDER SUSPECT HAS ENDED LIFE; BODY SOUGHT

Beaches Are Combed; Friends Quizzed By Detectives

LOS ANGELES, Oct. 22.—Southern California's beaches today became the focal points in the monster hunt for Winnie Ruth Judd as police sent out a call to officers of all shore communities to watch for the body of the suspected trunk murderer.

"With this latest development it became increasingly probable that the pursued woman, wanted for killing Hedwig Samuelson and Agnes Lerol and shipping their bodies in baggage trunks, might have eluded the vast police network through the medium of death.

All along the southern California coastline police of beach cities dispatched patrols to search the sands on the possibility that Mrs. Judd may have drowned herself in the ocean and her body washed ashore.

Patrols were also organized to search the mountains, the canyons and the reef of cliffs.

From Los Angeles police headquarters came the appeal to help in the investigation of the possibility that the hunted woman might have killed herself.

Meanwhile, search for the woman grew in intensity and spread all over the state of California and into Arizona and Mexico. Reports of lone women resembling Mrs. Judd continued to flood Los Angeles police.

The theory that the suspected murderer had taken her own life after her fantastic crime was discovered with the finding of the two victims' bodies in baggage trunks shipped here from Phoenix, Arizona, was held from the first by her husband, Dr. William C. Judd.

But it was only as the gigantic search entered its third day that Mrs. Judd's brother, Burton McKinney, a college student, admitted the possibility.

"I am afraid she has killed herself," young McKinney said.

The latest credible report coming to investigators was that of a taxicab driver who informed police he had driven a woman, answering Mrs. Judd's description through downtown streets to a hotel Tuesday night.

The driver said the woman appeared nervous and concerned over the trunk murders, flaming in newspaper headlines shouted by the newsboys.

"She kept talking about the trunk murders," the driver related. "She asked me what the penalty is for such a crime in California and Arizona."

The cab-man gave color to the belief that Mrs. Judd may still be hiding somewhere in the city.

Receiving from Phoenix police the names and addresses of several Los Angeles friends of Mrs. Judd, officers today were questioning these friends, one of whom, a man, was reported to have gone to Mexico Tuesday in his automobile.

This fact strengthened the theory that Mrs. Judd had fled to Mexico, where she formerly had resided and had friends. She speaks Spanish fluently.

Young McKinney underwent another grilling today. Officers believed he knew where his sister had gone.

Although McKinney was freed from technical custody, he was being watched. It was to him that Mrs. Judd Monday noon went for help in endeavoring to obtain the murder trunks from a railroad station.

ETERNAL TRIANGLE LATEST THEORY FOR SLAYING OF SUITOR

Learn Victim Planned To Wed Another Woman

COLUMBUS, O., Oct. 22.—Life's eternal triangle stood revealed today as the possible key to the fatal shooting of Willis H. Brown, 50-year-old advertising salesman, as police sought a missing witness to his death.

Mrs. Maude G. Malloy, facing a charge of first degree murder for shooting Brown, steadfastly maintained her innocence on the grounds she was only bluffing when she threatened Brown with the death weapon, and had no intention of shooting him.

The third member of the triangle, Mrs. Lura Carpenter, was revealed to police as the woman Brown was to have married on Thanksgiving day, and officers are working on the theory the salesman's death came at the hands of Mrs. Malloy through jealousy over the other woman.

The missing witness sought by police is the unknown person who knocked at the door of Mrs. Malloy's home Tuesday just as she drew a borrowed revolver on Brown and demanded to know from him whether or not he was going to marry her and give her money.

The first degree murder charge was filed against Mrs. Malloy yesterday. It followed a day of intense questioning by police.

Mrs. Carpenter's romance with Brown was disclosed to police as she appeared to inform the authorities that Mrs. Malloy had threatened Brown about three weeks before the tragedy.

Although Malloy was freed from technical custody, he was being watched.

At the grave, the driver related. "She asked me what the penalty is for such a crime in California and Arizona."

The cab-man gave color to the belief that Mrs. Judd may still be hiding somewhere in the city.

CAPITAL HOPEFUL THAT DISCUSSIONS MAY BRING RESULTS

Unlikely, However, That Nations Can Get Together

NEW YORK, Oct. 22.—Pierre Laval, premier of France, came to the United States today, so that, he said, "Our two great Democracies together may search for and apply methods which will restore calm and reestablish equilibrium."

This will be attempted during conversations which are to take place between the French statesman and President Hoover at Washington during the next three and a half days and, it is believed, will encompass such labyrinthine subjects as modification of reparation payments, involving a possible American guarantee of French political security, revisions of inter-governmental debts, drastic arms reductions, and international trade and currency relations.

The president of the council of the ministers of the French republic, to accord him his proper title, accompanied by his daughter Jose, arrived at Quarantine in the French liner Le De France shortly after two o'clock this morning. It was not until 9:24 a.m. that the city tug Macon landed him at the Battery where, for the first time, he stepped foot on American soil to receive the welcome and freedom of the city and the acclaim of the nation.

The French statesman took time in New York only for a brief and elaborate ceremony of welcome at the city hall and a hurried automobile ride to the station, where he and his entourage boarded the business car of George Le Boutillier, vice-president of the Pennsylvania railroad, which was attached to a special train and scheduled to depart for Washington at 11:00 a.m.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 22.—A hopeful but frankly skeptical Washington awaited the arrival today of the French premier, Pierre Laval, who has crossed the Atlantic to inaugurate a series of conferences with American officials that contain almost incalculable possibilities.

Washington is hopeful that these discussions will result in understandings and cooperative endeavor that will relieve international irritation over disarmament, international debts, reparations, trade balances, the gold standard, and kindred aggravations. But at the same time Washington is skeptical that anything will result from M. Laval's visit except the earnest presentation of the French and American viewpoints on these problems. And those viewpoints, it might be added, clash at nearly every turn.

The discussions between Premier Laval and his aides and President Hoover and his cabinet advisers will be unlimited in scope. As Secretary of State Stimson phrased it, "the sky's the limit."

But while the sky may be the limit to the problems discussed, the limit of agreement is considerably less than that. M. Laval comes to Washington with a tight check-rein imposed upon him by the French parliament and by French public opinion. Similarly, President Hoover is under the same potential limitation of the American congress, which meets six weeks hence in a somewhat critical and querulous mood.

Thus, while the discussions themselves will cover a wide range of subjects—even France's dream of drawing the United States into a consultative pact is not to be barred—actually the field of agreement may be said to be fairly narrow because of Franco-American differences of long-standing.

President Hoover is determined to force, if possible, considerable reduction in world armament, which he considers in part responsible for the economic ills that beset every major power.

The French thesis on this is that there can be no appreciable reduction in French armament unless there is an international agreement to guarantee France's security.

It was believed that the famous couple would take off from here by airplane for the East as soon as they could be taken to the flying field, where a ship awaits them.

There were about 200 automobiles parked out and near the naval reservation, filled with sightseers as the Akron shortly before 6 o'clock nosed down to the mast. The ground crew berthed the airship in the hangar without mishap.

"Come and get your money. We are quitting," was the burden of a circular letter sent to 3,500 depositors of the institution, The Safety State Bank.

Daniel Harkin, president of the bank, explained that the officers and directors had decided to quit business voluntarily because of the decline in deposits and the lack of earnings.

In closing voluntarily The Safety State Bank follows the example of the Mayfair State Savings Bank, the first institution of its kind in Chicago to discontinue business because of falling off of profits.

The "very clean, orderly condition" of the city lockup at police headquarters is praised in a report received by Dr. F. M. Chambliss, president of City Commission, from S. C. The jail is conducted in a "very humane manner and is an excellent example of good order and discipline," Mr. Griffen said.

The investigator said that while "this is not a modern jail in construction, the management recognizes its limitations in lack of facilities for classification of prisoners and uses it only as a lockup and not for serving of fine or sentence."

AL CAPONE

First by his own admission in the form of a plea before the trial court, and then by the considered decision of a jury, Alphonse Capone stands before the world guilty of an offense that makes him liable to a long term in a federal penitentiary and to a heavy fine. There is no doubt that Capone did the things of which he was convicted and to which, in substance, he confessed.

Yet there are legal authorities in Chicago who think that Capone's attorneys will be able to keep his case in the higher courts for two years or thereabouts, so that "even if the verdict is upheld, Capone may not enter prison before 1933," while the prosecutors are "hopeful that not more than a year will be required to dispose finally of Capone's appeal from his income tax conviction."

The ridiculous inefficiency of legal procedure in the United States as an instrumentality for quick and effective justice was never exposed more strikingly than it is in this ghastly prospect. Nobody has any actual doubt about the essential facts in the Capone case. Yet because of an incrassation of absurd technicality and procedure, and because of a ridiculous custom of allowing the attorneys for a convicted person to commence an effort to transform the prosecution into the defense the moment a culprit is found guilty, the Government and people of the United States must, unless something resembling a miracle intervenes, now waste months of time and large sums of money to prevent nullification of a manifest act of justice. Not only that, general law enforcement will be hampered, slowed down and to a degree defeated, because persons charged with the enforcement will be unavoidably engaged in repeating labors they have already performed in a way that ought to satisfy all reasonable demands.

If this condition existed with respect to only one case it would be irritating and rather disgusting, but not fearfully serious. Unfortunately there is nothing unique about the Capone case. It is much like hundreds and perhaps thousands of others that go through the courts every year, except that it is a little more extreme than most, in that a confession as well as a conviction determines the established facts. And it has had special advertisement because the culprit is a person of notoriety. But it does not promise to be any more drawn out or any more the plaything of experts in the art of using obstructive technicalities than others have been, the Fall case, for instance.

Although we talk a great deal about justice for offenders against society, the amount of effective justice handed out is constantly on the decrease, and the number of offenders as constantly increases.

NO LOANS BUT FOR PRODUCTION

President Hoover came out against loaning money to other countries for anything but productive purposes, in an address given to the Pan-American commercial conference. He condemned loans made for war purposes, or for balancing budgets, or non-productive purposes generally.

The American people have loaned out a great deal of money to foreign countries during recent years, and many of them wish they hadn't now. In so far as loans were made for useful industrial development, they will eventually help these countries to recover from the war, and such loans will probably be repaid. But our people ought to wake up their minds that they or their government are not going to lend any more money for countries to fight wars with.

From now on, any country that is determined to go to war, contrary to all sense and reason and to the agreements it has made, should be required to take its own money for that purpose. If countries had to fight wars with their own money, mighty few wars would be fought. To the people of countries which desire to fight, would refuse to buy the bonds issued to pay war expenses, the chances of war breaking out would be still less.

It is conceivable, though extremely unlikely, that our country might at some distant date become involved in another war, and our people in that case would have to pay for it. But poor old poverty stricken Europe could not possibly attack our country, for many years anyway. Hereafter, when people are asked to loan money to foreign countries, they should make sure that the money is to be used for construction or productive equipment, and not for destruction by war or other waste. People can be fairly sure in future, that if they lend money to foreign countries for war purposes, they will never see it again.

WANAMAKER SAID

A decade ago, when the United States was passing through a period of industrial depression, John Wanamaker, founder of one of the most successful mercantile houses in the country wrote:

"There will be plenty of work for all if we show our faith, not by relaxing our efforts, holding back in fear, putting on blue glasses, and keeping our money in our pockets, but by making needed improvements, starting to build and rebuild, buying and selling, everything we have, for the good of the country. Money must come out of its hiding place, in banks and in the homes, and go to work along with our mental and physical energy, to build new homes, new stores, new factories, new businesses, new courage and new faith. I have more faith in America today and more expectation for the future than at any time in my 60 years as a merchant."

John Wanamaker knew what he was talking about. The processes to which he exhorted his countrymen in 1921 derrick them out of the doldrums and ushered in a period of unprecedented prosperity. The same processes are required today to meet and defeat another spell of economic subsidence, with its concomitant fear and hesitancy. They will lead upward in 1931, as surely as they did in 1921.

HAS NO IDEALS

Sabatini, author of 30 historical novels, warily denies that he considers Alphonse Capone a hero for romance. The literary defect of Chicago's scar-faced gangster is that he "seems really to have no ideals."

Capone may be the center of an atmosphere of intrigue, treachery, shots in the dark and raw power that lends itself to thriller literature; but a man must have more than that to break into the loftier altitudes of historical romance. A hundred years from now, Sabatini opines, a writer of historical romances will find Signor Mussolini the most inspiring personality of this stirring generation. The power and intrigue are there—and ideals with them.

With much of which we are cordially disposed to agree. Without ideals, a thug is only a thug. All the genius that has gone into historical romancing since history began to be written could not make of a cheap criminal, a character whose exploits would hold the interest of intelligent readers. After all, we admire ideals in people we read about.

In forbidding its students to seek salvation at the knees of Aimee Semple McPherson-Hutton, isn't the management of Harvard University rather uncomplimentary to somebody?

MY NEW YORK

By JAMES ASWELL

NEW YORK.—In the side streets entering Second Avenue below 15th street, there are restaurants of a dozen nations. In one space of a hundred yards are to be found Italian, Jewish, Ukrainian, Russian and Gypsy eating places. Food is exceedingly native and exceedingly cheap.

Tourists are frequently misled into thinking that astonishing bargains in cuisine are to be ferreted out in these low-priced cafes. There are no bargains in food, anywhere in the world, if my experience means anything. Good food is costly, whether prepared in the Bowery or in Park avenue.

As a matter of fact, one of the most expensive places to eat in Manhattan is situated in a neighborhood of tenements. The five-course dinner I ate last night in 8th street was a bargain at 50¢—but it would have been a gyp at 75¢.

SECRETS OUT

The slow-motion picture camera has vastly complicated the work of football coaches throughout the country. Time was when scouts depended upon the eye to record the intricacies of high-speed trick plays. Now they needn't bother.

Not only do the standard newsreels show the most-involved and would-be baffling plays in clear detail, but in such a way that even a layman can understand. And the more progressive scouts are now equipped with small hand movie cameras which record the stratagems of rivals thoroughly and exhaustively.

The result of all this has been a gradual discard of plays which depend for their effectiveness upon trickery alone. The coach of today rehearses his surprise play in strict secrecy—and when he has used it once he seldom repeats.

Meanwhile several of the newsreels have obtained permanent records of the outstanding gridiron stars of the day—in action. Columbia Pictures is preparing a series to show Brill, Cardillo, Savoldi, of Notre Dame; Booth, of Yale; Moran, of Syracuse; Stecker, of Army; Bowstrom, of Navy; Russell, of Northwestern, and Stanczyk, of Columbia.

JUMP, SKIP AND HOP

There are few Japanese gardens in Manhattan, but the oriental gardeners, all landscaping experts, ... When a movie concern out on Long Island wanted a cherry blossom set, with rustic pools, goldfish and all the rest, they looked for gardeners and found them in droves. ... Many have been forced to become laundrymen to live.

Eddies off the whirlpool: The myriad, sleepy side-street hotels, each with its clientele gathered through generations. ... Some of them mystify in being able to exist at all. ... Who knows about them?

Hotels with electric signs, half of whose bulbs are out. ... Hotels with red plush foyers and gilded elevator doors. ... Hotels that get into the newspapers like this: "The suspect and his accomplices were captured in a mid-town hotel" ... and, very probably, with pair of Victorian spinster sisters living on the next floor all unknown. ... Hotels with registration desks on the second floor. ... Hotels featuring room and bath for 75¢. ... But the bath is not private.

On the anniversary (eighteenth) of the appearance of the "Three Keatons" on the big time in New York, Buster's friends, Paul White, Sid Grauman, Lew Cody and others, sent the comedian a barrel of brooms—because in the first smash appearance of Buster he broke a broom every night.

THE "BIG SHOT"

PROGRESSIVES UPHOLD COMPETITION PRINCIPLE IN UTILITY OPERATION

paper, "We cannot," as the committee expresses it, "regulate our regulators."

With what anxiety the committee regards the outlook may be judged from its warning:

"Involved in the solution of these problems lies the relief of our agricultural population from unprofitable labor and the relief of our industrial population from insecurity of employment."

However, it is sufficiently clear what the committee complains of in the present situation; equally clear what the committee thinks ought to be done about it.

Conservatives are sure to say that the whole thing is socialistic.

As a matter of fact, the committee does carry its argument up to a point from which a Socialist could continue it, without a hitch, to a termination in full accord with its own political philosophy.

"It will not be possible for the people to enjoy sustained prosperity so long as they are compelled to pay increasing tribute to support the fictitious values of vast private fortunes based on the earning power of special privileges."

"It will not be possible for the people to enjoy a representative government so long as they are compelled to pay increasing tribute to support the corruption of public opinion and the private control of public offices."

The progressives' committee instead, taking a different track from the one the Socialist would follow, arrives, almost with an effort (as it had been at especial pains not to travel in a socialistic direction) at an individualistic destination.

"Public utilities furnishing transportation, communication, light, heat, power or water," begins the report, "are public agents authorized to transact public business...."

They collect and spend revenues exceeding $12,000,000,000 annually, which, since their payment is a condition of daily subsistence, ... essentially are taxes."

But, as the report points out, instead of being directly run by the public, actual ownership and operation of these agencies are vested mainly in private persons whom we have sought to... control by means of government regulation.

"Our efforts at governmental regulation of privately owned utilities have produced the counter force of private regulation of government."

The report inferentially scoffs at the suggestion of stricter regulation, in the hope of remedying this state of affairs, because, however strictly they may be regulated on Governmental, federal, state or municipal, of course, is the socialistic solution of the problem.

It is not so radical a solution, either, considering how well postal communication already is governmental even in the United States; that telegraphs and telephones are governmentalized in most other civilized countries; that railroads are governmentalized in several of them; that waterworks are municipalized in nearly every American city of importance.

SPORT SNAP SHOTS

FRAMED
by Phil

"Sport Snapshots Framed by Phil," a feature of the sport page of The Gazette for several years, is resumed with this issue in response to a request by readers.

This column and other special treatment of sport news were discontinued recently due to a change in news policy. Then friends of the sport page rallied to its support. Without knowledge of the paper, a petition was circulated asking that the former treatment of local sport news be resumed.

The petition, signed by 307 fans, was circulated for several days in the business district and then presented to this paper. The Gazette considers this unusual expression of reader interest a particularly fine tribute to the efforts it is making and has always made to present an interesting, readable newspaper. It is encouraging evidence that these efforts have their reward in loyalty from subscribers. That these readers should voluntarily petition for return of this department is a handsome compliment that might well be considered flattering to any newspaper endeavoring to serve its public faithfully. Of course these petitioners will get what they want. This column will be turned over to Phil Frame, its conductor for several years, tomorrow. Today, being in a mellow mood, we want to indicate our gratitude to these loyal friends by publishing their names. —The Editor.

There's nothing quite so satisfactory as a "little" hat. Also showing hats with brims. We cannot all wear the same type. The designers keep this in mind, and they are quite moderate in price. With small touches of velvet or satin—

TUBERCULOSIS SPECIALISTS ARGUE OVER CREDIT FOR MAKING DISCOVERY

NEW YORK, Oct. 22—Two tuberculosis experts of international repute are at loggerheads today over the little matter of which should get credit for first discovering that the germs of their disease specialty can be "domesticated," made non-deadly.

Dr. Stephen J. Maher, of New Haven, Conn., chairman of the Connecticut tuberculosis commission, is the belligerent in the case.

He charges that Dr. Franklin R. Miller, of the Rockefeller Institute for Medical Research, this city, and Lakeside Hospital, Cleveland, recently made a bold attempt to discover a cure for tuberculosis.

Dr. Miller, writing as a researcher at the laboratories of the Rockefeller Institute, announced his "find" in a short paper published October 2 in "Science," the official publication of the American Association for the Advancement of Science.

Dr. Maher promptly produced various reprints of papers on the same subject that show he announced the discovery twenty-five years ago, on August 15, 1906.

A full summary of his subsequent work on the virtually non-virulent type of tuberculosis bacilli was delivered personally by Dr. Maher at a joint meeting of the North German Tuberculosis Association and the Hamburg Research Association at Hamburg, Germany, in August, 1930.

These "proofs" were sent to Rockefeller Institute, from whence they have been forwarded to Dr. Miller, who lives at Lakeside Hospital, Cleveland.

Dr. Maher at New Haven today said he had not received a reply from Dr. Miller. By telephone from Cleveland, Dr. Miller reported that he is in process of writing an answer to Dr. Maher.

"I have not had time yet to study Dr. Maher's letter and date carefully," Dr. Miller said. "I think he is unfair in ascribing to me an effort to claim first discovery of the virtually non-virulent tuberculosis bacilli. In my paper I acknowledge that this is the only city he will visit in this section. Please note the above date carefully and be sure to come and investigate."

This visit is for white people only—Dr. J. Meinhardt, Home Office, 1351 North Crawford Ave., Chicago.

RUPTURE

E. J. MEINHARDT
COMING HERE AGAIN

He will personally demonstrate his method without charge at the Miami Hotel, Dayton, Ohio, on Tuesday only, Oct. 27th, from 10:00 a. m. to 6:00 p. m. Only men are invited.

Caution—Do not wear trusses, pads, plasters and devices that weaken the muscles, and do not submit to avoidable operations which often fail repeatedly.

Rupture often causes Stomach Troubles, Backache, Constipation, Nervousness, general weakness and other ailments. Hundreds of deaths from rupture can be avoided.

Notice—This is the only city he will visit in this section. Please note the above date carefully and be sure to come and investigate.

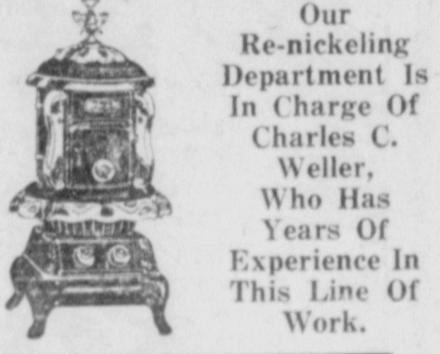

This visit is for white people only—Dr. J. Meinhardt, Home Office, 1351 North Crawford Ave., Chicago.

edged that this form had been known to exist."

Dr. Maher on the other hand cited a sentence from Dr. Miller's report in which he found the effort to claim the discovery. The sentence reads:

"Until recently no pure cultures of the non-acid-fast varieties (of tuberculosis germs) have been obtained."

Dr. Maher in the paper he read in Germany last year declared that he had obtained these "pure cultures of the non-acid-fast varieties" in 1906.

He first observed their development in cultures of descendants of a tubercle bacilli strain sent to this country fifty years ago by Robert Koch, German discoverer of the first tuberculosis germ.

RESTRICT PARKING FOR CARNIVAL HERE

Parking of vehicles on Main St., between Detroit and Whiteman Sts., on Green St., and also on Whiteman St. between Second and Market Sts. will be forbidden after 6 p. m. next Wednesday so as not to interfere with the annual community Hallowe'en celebration planned by the Xenia Retail Merchants' Association.

Police Chief O. H. Cornwell announced that he is having 100 "no parking" cardboard signs painted to remind people of the restrictions against parking of autos on the night of the celebration.

Two police cruisers, each manned by two patrolmen, will be on duty, roaming about the city in the evening, and two firemen will be stationed in the business district.

KEY BACK AFTER 37 YEARS

CHICAGO—Memories of life in the gay nineties were brought back to the employees of a downtown hotel recently when a guest returned an old room key which had been missing for thirty-seven years. The key had been mailed from Sydney, Australia.

Police Chief O. H. Cornwell announced that he is having 100 "no parking" cardboard signs painted to remind people of the restrictions against parking of autos on the night of the celebration.

Two police cruisers, each manned by two patrolmen, will be on duty, roaming about the city in the evening, and two firemen will be stationed in the business district.

A merry crowd of members of First A. M. E. Church and friends gathered at the home of Rev. and Mrs. Geo. Maxwell, Monday night, and surprised them; as a token of their appreciation for them, they depart to their new field of labor at Hamilton, O., Rev. Maxwell being sent there this conference year. Quite an enjoyable time was had in pleasant conversation, and an impromptu program and games of "ye olden times" after a delicious covered dish spread, all departed wishing the family God, been launched and all parents, teachers and friends are asked to enroll that we may be able to enlarge our program for this year.

Mrs. Bertha Booth E. Market St. teacher in the Lincoln School, who has been ill for a few days, has returned to resume her work.

The services at the Middle Run Baptist Church are very interesting.
